Bio – Pierre-Luc Cyr

I discovered dog agility in 1999 alongside my entire family. What started as a family activity quickly became a passion that has stayed with me for over 25 years.

An AAC member since 2008 and a judge since 2009, I have had the opportunity to experience agility from many perspectives: competitor, instructor, judge, and trial organizer. Over the years, I have trained nine dogs of different breeds and competed internationally eight times across three different events.

I am also the owner of Professionnel Légitime Canin, a dog training school located in Rougemont, Quebec. Since 2013, I have regularly organized AAC trials and worked with teams at all levels.

Supporting the next generation of agility competitors, especially junior handlers, is particularly important to me. Having discovered agility through my own family, I want to encourage young people to get involved in our sport and develop their passion.

In 2026, I had the privilege of chairing the organizing committee for the AAC National Championships in Brome, bringing together nearly 480 dogs. This experience reinforced my belief in preserving a national championship that brings our community together while finding sustainable solutions to support hosting clubs.

I believe the AAC should represent all agility enthusiasts, from those who participate simply for enjoyment to those aspiring to compete internationally. Our goals may differ, but we share the same passion. We must find compromises that allow everyone to feel included and represented.

As Quebec Director, I hope to promote transparent communication, advocate for our members, and contribute to an inclusive, collaborative, and forward-looking AAC.
